

A NEW WILD ROSE FROM SOUTHWESTERN CHINA. (ROSA SP.; S. P. I. No. 55721.)

This beautiful climbing rose was discovered by J. F. Rock on a high plateau in the cooler portion of the Himalayas in southwestern China at 8,000 feet altitude. The flowers, at first yellow but later becoming a delicate creamy white, are single and are borne in large clusters. (Photographed by J. F. Rock on the Lashipa Plain, Yunnan, China, May 11, 1922; P30247FS.)
